Election Welcomed in Europe

PARIS, May 20 (AP). - European nations today welcomed the election of Mr. Giscard d'Estaing as the new President of France, and saw happier days ahead for European unity.

Helmut Schmidt, the new West German chancellor, telephoned Mr. Giscard d'Estaing within hours of his election and the two agreed to meet as quickly as pos-sible to discuss urgent European problems. Mr. Schmidt and Mr. Giscard d'Estaing have been working together as finance ministers and are reported to get along well together.

British Prime Minister Harold Wilson, in a message of congratu-lation to Mr. Giscard d'Estning, said today that the common pur-poses and values they had to defend together were of paramount importance in the world. "You are taking up the leadership of France at a time which is full of challenge and opportunity for our two countries and for Europe," he said,

Kissinger Firms Pact In Syria Separation Line Apparently Set

By Bernard Gwertzman TEL AVIV, May 20 (NYT).— Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said tonight in Damascus that "good progress" was made in his talks with Syrian Pre-ident Hafez al-Assad toward concluding an agreement on a Golan

Heights troop separation between Syria and Israel. On the key problem of defining the demarcation line separating the two sides' forces, a senior U.S. official aaid on the Air Force jet flying from Damascus to Tel Aviv that "to all practical purposes the line was buttoned up."

Yesterday, Israel had said that the demarcation line proposed by Mr. Kissinger as n last-minute compromise could be accepted by Israel and Syria.

But the American official cautloned newsmen that, as Mr. Kis-singer begins to carry the final and specific ideas of each side to the other to wrap up the accord, the negotiations could be pro-longed. He said he would be "very surprised" if, having come this far, the two sides did not go all the way toward concluding an agreement, but he wanted to at least prepare the way for a longer period of negotiations than some newsmen have anticipated.

22d Day in Mideast Mr. Kissinger, who has kept ex-tending his Middle East trip cach week, now insists he must return to Washington by this weekend. Today was the 23d day since he left Washington. and he has told aides that be believes the secretary of state should not spend this long a period of time away.

Upon arriving here, Mr. Kissinger drove to Jerusalem for late-evening discussions with too

Israeli leaders. Mr. Kissinger will return tonicrow to Damacus and come back to Israel in the evening as part of his pattern of "shuttle diplomacy."
Mr. Kissinger in his four hours of talks with Mr. Assad and his top aides went over in detail the ortline of the proposed agreement and the various protocols or an-nexes that would be signed by the two sides in Geneva. In addition to the demarcation line-which now seems agreed upon—these include the size of the buffer zone that would senarate the two forces, the size and role of the United Nations superviscry forces in the area, the limits put on each side's military force in the area, and procedures for the release of prisoners and the re-entry of Syrian civilians into territory given up by Israel.

WASHINGTON, May 20 (IHT).-Federal Judge John Sirica today gracered President Nixon to turn over to his court tages and documents relating to 64 presidential conversations that were subpoenced by special prosecutor Leon Jaworski,

In a nine-page order, Judge Sirica rejected e motion by the President's attorneys that the subpoena be quashed and ordered that the material be turned over to him by May 31. However, he stayed execution of the order pending the completion of any appellate review and gave White House attorneys

The material was being sought by the special prosecutor as evidence in the Watergate cover-up conspiracy trial due to start Sept. 9 of seven former top White House and Nixon re-election campaign officials.

Last fall, after receiving the subpoenced tapes, Judge Sirica upheld claims of executive privi-lege for two conversations and portions of a third.

Labor Maintains Slim Lead As Australian Count Goes On

(Reuters).—The Labor party is expected to have a majority of between three and five seats in the new 127-seat House of Representatives, according to figures released tonight.

Complicated Tabulation

Vote counting continued and because of the need to redistribute preference votes in some conatituencles, the final figures may not be known until next week. Under Australia's electoral system, the candidate with the lowest vote is eliminated and oumbered preferences on the ballot are distributed to remaining candidates. This process continues until one candidate has a clear majority.

The result of the Senate election, also held on Saturday, may not he known for a month.

Labor had a majority of nine in the old, 125-seat House of Representatives, but Prime Min-ister Gough Whitlam dissolved Parliament after only 17 months of his three-year term hecause money bills were rejected by the opposition-controlled Senate.

Land Rights Proposed for Aborigines

By David Lamb

SYDNEY, May 20.-In a significant shift from past practices. a Commoowealth commission has proposed that aborigines in the Northern Territory should be freehold owners of their traditional land and share in its mmeral wealth.

The report - its recommendations have been endorsed by the federal government-suggests that no more mineral exploration licenses on aborigine land should be granted until at least 1977. After that, mining should be permitted only with aborigine approval or if the government decides it is in the national in-

This last qualification gives the government a loophole to authorize mining on aborigine land. something the Labor government has been reluctant to do, as evidenced by its ban on uranium mining by Queensland Mines.

Queensland Mines, which has tried unsuccessfully to negotiate ouning rights with aborigines. has deposits valued at more than U.S. $300 million and has said it will seek compensation from the government if denied the right

"The fact that a very poor group of people have turned down an offer ... abows how strongly they feel about it." said Justice Albert Woodward, chairman of the Aboriginal Land Rights Commission. The report was 18 months in the making.

But the proposal of ownership is likely to go only part way toward satisfying the territory's 22,000 full-blooded aborigines. who are deserting town settlements in increasing numbers to return to their traditional areas.

Militant urban spokesmen for the natiou's 150,000 aborigines have made land rights their foremost issue. They want complete authority to own and operate their land, including its faineral wealth.

The Woodward report rejects this demand. It says minerals should remain the property of the government because the earth's wealth belongs to all Australians. It adds that the aborigines should be able to prevent exploration except when the national interest is involved.

Prime Minister Gough Whitiam said his government would meet with aborogine councils and communities in the sparsely populated Northern Territory with the hope of enacting legislation after the general election, which took place Saturday. "It is a courageous step by the federal Labor government, especially because of the widespread opposition to such moves from various sectional interests," said Charles Perkins, the most senior aborigine public servant.

GENOA, May 20 (UPI:-A court bowed to guerrilla demands today and agreed to release eight imprisoned leftists in return for the release of kidnapped Assistant Prosecutor Mario Sossi.

Contradicting previous government statements that there would be no bargaining with the kidnappers, the court said the eight would be given provisional freedom and issued passports "ou coodition that Sossi's personal safety and freedom are insured."

For Ignoring Intelligence Information

U.S. Critical of Israeli War Error

By Drew Middleton

NEW YORK, May 20 (NYT) .--Israel's intelligence service, in the past regarded as the best in the Middle East and the equal of larger services, is under severe criticism because of its failure to assess Arab intentions correctly before the October war last year.

U.S. civilian and military intelligence communities, including a task force at the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan, have studied with dismay the errors of Israelis in evaluating their own information and the material made available to them by Western intelligence services.

Information now available shows that as early as Sept, 24 the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and the National Security Agency, the latter specializing in electronic intelligence, were convinced that a major Arab attack was coming and warned Israel. The Israeli command rejected the warning.

This rejection is in accord with the attitude of Israeli intelligence throughout the prewar period. In the view of U.S. and other Western sources, the Is-raelis were too confident of their knowledge of the Arabs and underestimated their potential enemies' ability to keep secrets.

PRINCETON, N.J., May 20.— While confidence in the nation's leadership, both at the presidentisl and congressional levels, is probably at the lowest ebb in this century, confidence in the future of the United States remains high. Sixty-eight percent of those polled express a high degree of confidence in the nation's future.

Sharp differences, however, emerge between major popula-tion groups. For example, far fewer blacks (45 percent) than whites (72 percent) express con-fidence in the nation's future.

Age, sex 2nd level of formal education are also factors. Fiftythree percent of persons between the ages of 18 and 29 express "quite a lot" of confidence, com-pared with 72 percent among the 30-to-49-year-old group and 75 percent among the 50 and older

Seventy-seven percent of persons with a college background indicate they have "quite a lot" of confidence in the future of the country, compared with 66 percent among those with a highschool background and 63 percent among those whose formal education has been limited to grade

'Renewal and Change'

By his narrow victory, Valery Giscard d'Estaing has brought France into that large company of democratic states in which government and opposition are asparated by the alightest of numerical margins. To be sure, under the presidential system of the Fifth Republic, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing has both a security of tenure and a power that is denied parliamentary premiers. But he also has a vaguer party system; he actually represents a minority group in the partisan sense, and it will be on that ahaky footing that he must work to transmute a mystique into a policy.

If France's new President has a popular mandate, after the confusing rhetoric of the eampaign, it is to bring about change. Both he and his opponent, François Mitterrand, promised changes to a France uneasy about inflation and the inequitable dividends of years of prosperity. And while those who rejected the Mitterrand coalition of the left may have done so because they feared change would come too fast and go too far with Mr. Mitterrand's Communist allies in the government, it was "renewal and change" that the victor promised in his televised address when victory seemed as-

In foreign policy, it is generally expected that Mr. Giscard d'Estainz will move closer to West Germany and to what Gen. De Gaulle used to call the "Anglo-Saxons"-Britain and America. The new President's victory announcement in English seemed to confirm the latter expectation. This will be welcome-it offers new hope to revive the sagging Atlantic cooperation and the distracted Common Market.

But Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's real test will come at home, where the large vote rolled up by Mr. Mitterrand teatifies to much unhappiness with things as they are in France. This unhappiness need not express itself only in votes—the votes just counted or those that are to be counted in coming sessions of the National Assembly. The events of another May, just six years ago, are a stark reminder that strikes and demonstrations can have their own political impact.

The mood of France, in the wake of the campaign, does not seem to warrant such fears. But. then, who expected, in 1968, that some student disorders could precipitate such widespread and threatening social and industrial unrest? It will be the primary task of the new President to organize a government, a party alignment and a program that will meet the needs both of those who voted for him, and those who voted against him; to bring about a constructiv? "renewal and change" that will unite a divided nation.

First Oil, Now Bauxite

Jamaica, the world's largest exporter of bauxite, has rejected an offer by American aluminum producers that would have boosted their tax and royalty payments to the faland's government from $25 million to $30 million in the coming 13 months; instead. Jamaica is demanding an increase to about $200 million. Granting that demand would entail the biggest increase in any raw material price since the Arabs clamped their oil embargo on the West during the Mideast war last fall and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries quadrupled the price of oil.

The action by Jamaica will be a crucial test of whether the example provided by the oil cartel can be imitated by other commodity producers. Although Jamaica has acted alone in pressing for the blg hike in the bauxite price, it is the key member of the newly formed International Bauxite Association, which also includes Australia, Guyana, Sierra Leone, Guinea, Surinam and Yugoslavia.

The IBA does not bill itself officially as a price-fixing cartel, on the OPEC model, but it could well turn into one if the Jamaican price boost sticks. And the major copper exporters Chile, Peru, Zaire and Zambia, who have banded themselves together in the Intergovernmental Council of Copper Exporting Countries (CIPEC)-will also be anxious observers of the test of whether there can be, as the magazine Foreign Policy has put it, "one, two, many OPECs, . . . "

It is of course possible that oil is uniquely qualified as a commodity whose price can be rigged and held by an international cartel; vet there is at least as much surface plausibility to the argument of many economiats that the oil cartel itself is bound to break down, because it has set its monopoly price far too high. As a result, substitutes for petroleum may in due course be found.

The world may not have time, however, to see whether long-run market forces will eventually restora equilibrium to the prices set by a growing list of would-be international monopolists. The effort to form cartels to boost commodity prices still higher can make the vicious cycle of world inflation spin faster and faster.

The commodity producers are trying to introduce a form of "indexation" that could become a perpetual-motion machine which is bound to disintegrate "- a crash. This appears to be precisely the sort of indexing that the oil and now bauxite producers have in mind. In the words of Jamaica's Prime Minister Michael Manley: "The underdeveloped nations can no louger continue to supply raw materials to developed countries on the old basis and, in an inflationary world, it is important to link the value of raw materials to the value of finished products."

Before all countries-including the developed countries, many of which are also major commodity exporters-are drawn into an inflationary game of "beggar-my-neighbor." a determined effort should be made to restore some reason and order to international commodity pricing. * * *

Starting with the specific cases of oil and bauxite, the importing countries should unite to protect themselves against exploitation by international cartels. If possible, it would be well to avoid confrontations with commodity suppliers: It would be far better to seek to reach international commodity agreements to ensure equitable pricing. stable markets for suppliers and reliable access to raw materials for importers. Both producing and consuming countries have much to gain from viewing their problems in a long-term context. Stability depends on

The alternative is likely to be economic warfare-and economic breakdown-with disastrous consequences for all.

India's A-Test

Peaceful in intent as India's underground nuclear test may be. . . it will not lack its psychological fallout. It is the fault of the auperpowers that man's most horrific means of self-destruction is still only partially under international control. The danger is that smaller nations, playing with fire, will one day burn down the whole house.

Election of Giscard

While the most obvious image of France today is that of a country dramatically split in two, the reality is the vacuum left by the collapse of Gaullism. With the end of the myth of the "majority as a fact," that is, of stability and continuity, the need arises for an exercise of power that imposes, as never before, bargaining with the minority. This is the opposite of all that for which the Fifth Republic was born.

> -From Corriere della Sera (Milan.) * * *

As far as Atlantic and European relationships are concerned the peculiar problems posed by France to its partners will probably not end with Valery Giscard d Estaing as President. In that respect there is no reason for making illusions. ## Checking Big Brother—II

By Tom Wicker

STOCKHOLM.—"If you gather much unimportant information together, it can become very important," says Jan Freese, the staff director of Sweden's new Data Inspection Board. The fact that a certain woman is a widow may mean little to someone who does not know her. If it also is known that she has been left a large income, that she sub-scribes to numerous romance magazines, and occasionally drinks too much, she may quickly become the target of unscrupulous approaches.

The combination of just such "unimportant" personal information and its unlimited collation and storage in computers is especially easy in Sweden, where povernment agencies collect an immense amount of data for welfare state purposes, and tradition backed by law makes this information generally available to the public. Jan Freese's job and that of the Data Inspection Board is to administer a new law designed to maintain the most important forms of privacy without sacrificing the genuine benefits of computer technology. The board's first task, after the law becomes effective July 1. will be to register, inspect and license existing "personal registers"-any index, list or other notes stored in a computer and containing personal data about identifiable people. There may be 50,000 or more such registers now in operation in this highly organized and technological country, but most are relatively small and limited in scope a small outlinessman's payroll, for example.

Strong Directives

After July 1. anyone wanting to establish a new personal reg-ister will have to be licensed by the data board. Either for existing or for new registers, the board will be entitled to issue strong directives as to how the register may be used, what data may be collected, who can have access to it. whether persons registered in the file must be informed, and how data must be stored, weeded out and safeguarded. The law mandates complete access for the hoard to any personal register, and even allows the board to deny the establishment of a register, or to order one closed. Some of the other provisions of the Swedish data act are as

o Individuais may inspect their own flies in any register on demand once a year, force corrections of inaccuracies or incomplete data and collect money damages for any injury doce them by the circulation of inaccurate or incomplete information.

e The data board will designate a "responsible keeper" for any personal register, and the keeper will be liable to criminal charges if he violates the rules laid down for his register-for example, if he supplies information to anyone he bas reason to suspect will use it illegally.

 If a register is to be closed. the data board will decide what to do with the information It contains mate grievances and complaints.

All this applies with force unusual in Swedish law to privately owned personal registers—the oig ones, for instance, now operated by direct mail and advertising firms. It is not so clear what powers the board has la relation to government registers, which are the biggest and perhaps the most dangerous potentially.

Impact Seen

The board can inspect government registers and make recommendations: It must be "consulted" before new government registers are established. But It cannot direct other government agencies and force compliance. Given the general civility of Swedish institutions, bowever, and parliament's declared interest in controlling excesses in personal data processing, Mr. Freese and other officials believe the data board will have great im-

In one important matter-the police files-this ambiguity may not be so important as it would be in the United States, Sweden has only a national police force -there are no province or city forces-so the safeguarding of shared police data is not an issie as it is, for example, when the FBI provides a criminal record to a city police force that has inadequate control over information in its files.

Even so, Bertil Wennergren, the parliamentary ombudsman who will oversee the workings of tha data board, fears that its power to affect government data practices-particularly those of the national police-may not be sufficient. But at least Sweden is making a start in a field without real precedent The United States and most other computer countries are just beginning to

Narrowing the Issue

Focus on Impeachme

By Anthony Lewis

BOSTON -- An essential task that will face the House Judiciary Committee in due course is to take the extensive charges against President Nixon and reduce them to a relatively few counts in a bill of impeaciment. For in this process, as in criminal justice, focusing on a few manageable issues is likely to be more effective.

One count could charge specific attempts to obstruct justice in the winter of 1973. In the opinion of many lawyers experienced in the criminal law, the edited White House transcripts provide evidence, ample by indictment standards, that Nixon approved the payment of hush money and suborned perjury "to keep tha cap on the bottle" of Watergate.

A second count could well allege a larger design to impede the Watergate investigation. would cite many overt acts by which, over a period of months, Nixon sought to frustrate the

The published transcripts show Nixon persistently working to suppress as much information for as long a time as possible. He and his aides schemed to "stonewall," to make empty claims of "national security" and "executive privilege," to threaten the speaker of the House, to maneuver prosecutors—all in order to keep the facts from coming out in either a congressional or a judicial forum.

2. At least as of March 13, and even more explicitly on March 21, 1973, the President knew that various present and former members of his staff had committed crimes. He did not inform any of the Justice Department or FEI officials in charge of the Watergate investigation.

The President arranged to be briefed by Assistant Attorney General Henry Petersen on secret Watergate grand jury proceedings—ostensibly to ba ready to act against wrongdoers but actually, as the transcripts show, to work out new scenarios of evasion. On April 16 he explicitly promised Petersen that the information would "not be passed... because I know the rules of the grand jury." The next morning he told H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, two prime suspects.

gate through the spring and summer of 1973, Nixon made a number of statements that were false—and evidently designed to throw off the pursuers. For example, he said on May 22 he had not been aware of any offer of clemency or money to the Watergate defendants—both of which had in fact been thoroughly discussed on March 21. Last Aug. 15 he said he had been told of money to cover torneys' fees and family support" but not "to procure slience," but the March 21 talk was all about payments to procure silence.

Diego Garcia

The recent announcement that the British island of Diego Garcia is to be built into a huge U.S. naval complex, at vast expenditure, has caused deep concern among the inhabitants of South and Southeast Asia (where nearly one-fourth of mankind lives', and has aroused the fears of the bittoral African states. It seems illogical, to use only the mildest of words, that such bage sums should be expended when the economically backward nations themselves des perately need financial and technological help in order to bestow social and economic justice on peoples who have lived for centuries in poverty and misery. Why, they ask, must their peaceful Indian Ocean become the scene of the superpowers' naval rivalry and the storehouse of nuclear warheads?

In 1969, the prime minister of Sri Lanka (Ceylon), Mrs. Sirimavo Bandaransike, appealed to the conscience of mankind to make the Indian Ocean a zone of peace and goodwill. She was joined in her appeal by Mrs. Indira Gandhi, Prime Minister of India, not only because peace is essential to the area for economic and technological development, but because of the link in sentiment between two of the greatest proponents of peace, the Buddha, and in our time Mahatma Gandhi. Such appeals become necessary because of the intrusion of Soviet and U.S. naval forces, which have greatly increased in this area with the last decade

When it became apparent that the voices of Sri Lanka-and India would not be heeded by the two superpowers, 13 Afro-Asian nations, living on the periphery of the Indian Ocean and likely to be most gravely affected by naval rivalry there, introduced a resolution into the General Assembly of the UN in 1971. This resolution, declaring the Indian Ocean an area of peace, was adopted by an overwhelming majority of member nations. China joined India, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, Burma, Indonesia, Thailand and a host of African states in deciding to honor the resolution. But both the Soviet Union and the United States abstained, with the obvious intention of flouting the

Jean Cardinal Danielou

Jean Danielou. French Cardinal, Theologian, Dies

PARIS, May 20 (AP) -Jeau Cardinal Danielou, 69, a leading Catholic theologian, died today after complaining of illness while he was visiting frieods.

One of the rare priests to be named a cardinal without having served as a bishop or in any other administrative function, Cardinal Danielou was a professor of theology at the Catholic Institute of Paris from 1944 to 1969. His mission as a cardinal was to keep up haison with intellectual circles. He was a member of the Freuch Academy.

Cardinal Danielou was a strong defender of the primacy of the Pope and was one of the promoters of a "letter of fidelity and obeisance" which was sent to Pope Paul VI with more than 100.000 signatures.

He was one of the experts at the Second Vatican Council and aided in preparing the council document on the Church and the Modern World.

Cardinal Danlelou preferred civilian garb to ecclesiastical robes, which he donned only for ceremouies. One of his last public appearances was at the mass celebrated at Notre Dame Cathedral last month after the death of President Georges Pompidou.

Exultant but Uncasy But beyond the exultant mood in government circles and the element of self-congratulation. there seemed to be a kind of uncasiness about where India was going and what it was doing. "What this test proves more than anything cise is that, given clear policies. India has the talent, the resources and the in-frastructure that makes for high acbievement capability." the Hin-dustan Times said.

"The contrast between this and the bumbling groping and middle elsewhere is all the more painfully apparent," the news-paper said. "A nuclear bang, albeit peaceful, means little without a corresponding release of economic and political energy. It is the lack of political and economic energy, the sense of torpor mingled with erisis, that turns India's surprise nuclear explosion into something less than a trimmph and raises questions about the decision to go ahead with the project. Essentially, the contradictions in India are stark and the needs so bare that the development of nuclear leclinology seems a perplexing eart-before-the-horse step.

What India Needs

Even with the peaceful aims of India's nuclear energy program and blasts such as the one Saturday could belp India explore its mountains and mines up search of minerals—the money and effort spent seem, at first glance, virtually counter to what the nation needs.

At present, India is in desperate shape, and officials admit it. The population of 580 million is growing by 13 million a year. Perhaps 30 percent, about 175 million people, live below the poverty line, or $30 a year. Consumption of food, edible oil and cloth has declined. Industrial production is stagnant. More than 70 percent of the populace is illiterate. About 75 percent of recent university graduates are unemploy-Coal, steel and fertilizer production are lagging. Nevertheless, India spent $173 million during the five years from 1969 to 1974 for "research, design and development" in the Department of Atomic Energy, the central government nuclear agency. In the same period, India spent about, $200 million on housing. $370 million on family planning and $1 billion on education.

Next Five Years

Within the next five years, until 1979. India is tentatively set to spend $315 million on atomic energy, $700 million on family and $2.3 billion on education.

India's yearning to have atomic energy-but not necessarily a nuclear device-dates back to Mrs. Gandhi's father, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, who spurred the growth of a nuclear energy program designed, initially, to generate electricity, develop and apply radio-isotopes and radiation in agriculture, biology, medicine and industry. At the time, Mr. Nehru was consistently campaigning for a ban on the use of atomic energy for military pur-

It was widely reported in the 1960s that India could create a nuclear device but would not do Four years ago, however. Mrs. Gandhi told Parliament that research was taking place in India for touching off a nuclear explosion. Although there abere few details available about Saturday's blast, there was a general consensus among Indian journalists and some officials that its tuning was carefully arranged by Mrs. Gandhi.

Some sources insist that Mrs. Gandlu's main aim was to lit the morale of both the government and the people at a time when the mood was bleak. Publicly, officials said the explosion was designed to lind out the cratering effect of the nuclear device and to see how far it helped crush the rock in the sub-structure of the earth. ### 'Cosi' in Paris --- Under The Surface Of the Game

By David Stevens DARIS, May 20 (IHT) .- Some

very exciting Mozart singing and Jean-Pierre Ponnelle's beguiling sets and costumes and emotionally disconcerting staging are quite enough to commend the production of "Cosi Fan Tutte" that had its first performance Friday at the Paris Opera. Ponnelle's production is fundamentally the one that gave Salzburg's Mozart traditions such a jolt at the 1969 festival, and which he has repeated at other theaters since then. He goes beyond the roccoo artificiality and formal asymmetry of the operaformal symmetry of the opera, digging below the surface of Don Alfonso's game to exploit its rich vein of real and ambiguous human feeling. At the end of this "Cosi," when the transposed lovers are presumably back in place, Guglielmo's unsubdued rage st his betrayal" is more convincing than the happy ending it con-tradicts. The real outcome of the wager is by no means sure.

Ponnelle's production is a feast for the eyes, too, with its succession of stage pictures evoking an 18th-century atmosphere, like a series of richly detailed period engravings, in the reduced open-ing of his stage within a stage. His hasic set usefully nullified the unsuitably vast expanse of the Paris stage and gave the singers the reinforcement of an acoustic

The Art Market: Young Dealer Turns to Old Masters

By Souren Melikian DARIS (IHT) .- The Aaron family has come full circle with a new exhibition of old masters in Aaron beadquarters at a private mansion in the fashionable 16th arrondissement of Paris.

Didier Aaron is the famous antiques dealer who once devoted his major efforts to old-master paintings. But, as time went on, he expanded his interests, incorporated his business, developed the interior decoration part of his interests and went into the obvious corollary: deluxe modern furniture.

Now his son, Olivier, 26, returning to the family fold after thorough art edocation including stints at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, has brought up the old masters business again.

The current exhibition marks young Aaron's official entry into his father's business, But his training was such that it would have seemed unlikely that he would ever become a dealer.

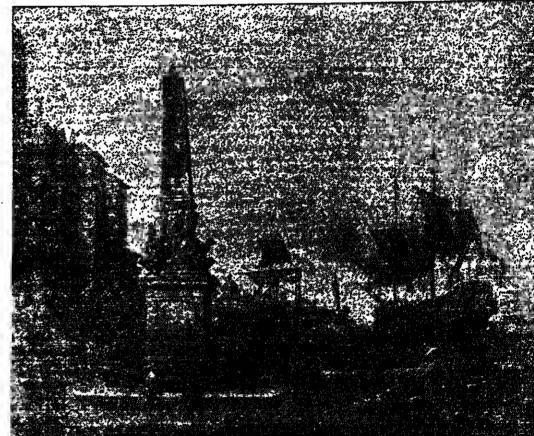

After graduating from Sciences Po (officially: Institut d'Etudes Politiques), Olivier Aaron took a master's degree at the Institute of Art and Archaeology in Paris. Then, perhaps anxious to divest himself of any lingering "commercial" suspicion that would hinder his chances in French academic circles, he went to New York to the Met. where he worked under Everett Fahey, now director of the Frick Collection, on the cataloguing of the Wrights-man collection. His job was to study the 18th-century French drawings, a Delacroix painting, some impressionist works. He recalls his experiences in New York -if he wanted to study a Goya. it would be taken down and placed in his office for a month and admits, "I am afraid I am a bit difficult now."

In London

After New York came a stint in the woodwork and furniture department in the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, This proved helpful in widening his knowledge of display techniques. Then, Olivier Aaron returned to Paris, where old master paintings-the noble art, by university standards-proved an irresistible attraction. By now, the Aaron enterprise on the Avenue Raymond-Poincaré had several associate companies, including one run by Léon Helft specializing in silver. It seemed logical to open an old masters branch and turn it over to young Aaron.

The striking thing shout the inaugural exhibition is its unmistakable "museum" flavor. that there are any Rembrandts or Vermeers-but some of the pictures typify an art historian's preoccupation in that they are either "discoveries" or throw an interesting light on a trend.

Most typical of Olivier Aaron's approach is probably the work by Bartholomeus Breenberg, a second-rank painter. It is also a scoop: Aaron identified the work. The short notice in the catalogue smacks of scholarship with its four main references to the painter, all from learned journals (Aaron perhaps overlooked the fact that few buyers know that Jahrb. P. K. means Jahrbücher Preussischer Kunstsammlungen or that A. Q. means Art Quarterly -although of course these references are immediately comprehensible to the specialist). The painter is briefly characterized as a Dutchman specializing in Italian landscapes and historical or Rembrandt.

Then, Olivier Aaron makes his point. He identifies the picture as "Solomon's Judgment" (oil on panel, 27.5 by 69 centimeters) with the monogram C.P. "C.P." stands for Cornelis van Poelenburgh and sometimes appears on Breenberg's work because, says Aaron, the artist worked in Poelenburgh's studio. Indeed, the monogram often accompanies Breenberg's full signature. The initials can, therefore, not be taken as proof that the picture is by Poelenburgh, as was once argued.

Also in the show are two signed pictures by Breenberg, perfect parallels to "Solomon's Judgment." One, called Brothers," was part of the famous collection amassed by Count Rudolf Czernin in Vienna and auctioned at Christies in May, 1963. It has the same perspective, with the dome of the Pantheon in the background, the same figures in the crowd, the same Oriental costumes for the principals. This comparison, moreover, dates "So-lomon's Judgment," which must Michele Sindona-Franklin National's hope?

Italian Said to Be Key To N.Y. Bank's Future

NEW YORK, May 20 (AP-DJ) -- Italian financier Michele Sindona has rinerged as the key man at financially troubled Franklin New York Corp, parent of Franklin National Bank.

If he were to pick up all of the projected $50 million common stock offering to augment Franklin's capital, he could at recent prices wind up with more than 50 percent of the shares of Franklin. As a foreigner, he would first have to get the approval of the Federal Reserve Board for acquiring anything over 30 percent of a bank holding company.

Mr. Sindona makes his office at Franklin's headquarters here, but is listed only as a director of the holding company. He has brought on the board with him Carlo Bordoni, managing director of the Sindona-controlled, Milan-based Banca Unione and reputed to be "one of the world's best-qualified foreign exchange experts."

Franklin's troubles became public when it announced plans to omit dividends on its common and preferred stocks because of poor earnings. Later it disclosed a large loss in its foreignexchange department caused by unauthorized dealings by one of its traders. In addition to the plans to raise 550 million through rights offerings of its stock; it has undertaken a management shakeup.

Estimated Fortune

The press in Europe estimates Mr. Sindona's net worth at around $450 million, a considerable sum if true, but some Italian sources scoff at it. The shares of Mr. Sindona's Rome realty company, Generale Immobiliare, dropped sharply last week after word of Franklin's troubles hit Europe,

According to a close alde of the Italian financier, he has "emerged as a white knight woo's saved the bank." Whether he has or not remains to be seen. One government official familiar with the situation calls it still "very difficult,"

Mr. Sindona has yet to produce anything for sharebolders of U.S. companies in which he is involved. The three Amer-ican Stock Exchange-listed companies—Argus, Interphoto and Seaport-in which he has controlling miterests, are alling, and their stocks are as low as they have ever been.

Furthermore, Air. Sindons's 1.6-million-share holding in Talcott National, for which he pald $27.3 million just a year ago tand hoped to merge into Franklin, is now worth $7.6 million.

His 519.5 million in paper losses, moreover, do not include $328,604 in brokerage commissions, investment banking fees and legal expenses, plus interest of around $2,5 million accrued at an annual cost of 9 percent for the funds borrowed from Fasco AG, his Liechtenstein operation, to make the stock

Finally, the one million shares of stock in Franklin bought in July 1972 at $40 apiece, or roughly 25 percent above the then going market, were priced at $8.75 each when they last changed hands before the Securities and Exchange Commission halted trading in the stock. On paper, that works out to a $32

Just in Talcott and Franklin alone, in other words, Mr. Sindona has managed to blow almost $55 million.

Italians Reject Plea of EEC To Lift Curb on Farm Goods

By David Haworth

BRUSSELS, May 20 (IHT) .--The European commission is struggling to persuade the Italian government to exempt agricultural products from the recently imposed import deposit scheme, but has so far failed to break the deadlock.

Pierre Lardinois, EEC Agricultural Commissioner who spent fourteen hours in Rome Friday arguing with ministers, told 2 press conference here today: "The Italian measures have had a severaly disruptive effect on internal EEC trade."

He added that agricultural exports to Italy from strong-currency member countries like West Germany had been more seriously hit than those from France and Ireland.

As a result of the cootinuing disagreement, the EEC farm ministers' meeting scheduled for to-morrow has been postponed for a week. Meanwhile, said Mr. Lardinois, the commission is prepar-ing another package of compromises which he hoped the Italians could accept and which would alleviate the bardship on other EEC exporters.

The commissioner was not prepared to reveal today what the compromises will be. He said they needed the fullest possible discus-sion among his colleagues first. But it is understood they will involve some special provisions to cover the export of beer to Italy and adjustments to the so-called "green lira." the method by which Italian farm trade is calculated.

Trying to put the best face on the situation, Mr. Lardinois said It was "significant" that so far no other EEC country had taken any counter-measures against Italy. Nonetheless, the implication is accepted in official EEC circles that retaliatory action is a strong possibility unless the argument is settled soon.

The main sticking point is the duration of the Italian import scheme; other EEC governments want the Italians to commit themselves to a deadling,

Although Emilio Colombo, Italy's finance minister, is not opposed in priociple to compromises on farm produce, he has adamantly refused to promise when the import scheme will be suspended. When last in Brussels he indicated that his country's financial situation would hardly allow it to

Bankruptcy Possible at Japan Firm

TOKYO, May 20 (AP-DJ).— More than 40 foreign investors, mainly British, have been left holding the stock of a Japanese company which has just declared what seems to be Japan's largest bankruptcy in the post-World War II period.

The air-conditinoer producer and distributor Nilson Netsugaku Kogyo and its chief subsidiary Acromaster Co. have declared combined liabilities estimated at 62 billion yen-about $200 milhon. Mostly Institutions

According to the Finance Ministry, a total of 41 foreign investors were holding Nihon Net-sugaku stock by the end of last year. Of that total, 38 were thstitutions and the others individuals.

Only one of the investors could he immediately identified, and was named as Robert Fleming Co., a merchant bank.

Earlier this year Nihon Notsugaku's stock traded as high as 1,500 yen. It declined 320 yen last week, when rumors of linanrial difficulties began circulating on the stock exchange, and by Friday, when it last traded, it had falled to 690.

Tokyo Stock Exchange brokers reported that foreign investors were not thought to have sold Nilion Netsugaku stock jast week. On the contrary, one source said he had heard that fairly substantial lorgign purchases were made just before the rumors of financial difficulties began

The Tokyo Slock Exchange announced that from horrow Nihon Netsugaku shares will be listed at the exchange's special "llquidation" post, where trading will continue until Aug. 28. In taking action today, Nihon

Netsugaku and Aeromaster asked the Osaka district court to appoint a receiver under the country's corporate rehabilitation law. Liquidation Possible

In a statement, the court said that it would take "some weeks" to find out whether the law could be applied. If not, and if no one came forward to pay the liabilities, the companies would be liquidated.

The two firms filed for receltership after failing to raise funds to buy back about 1.9 hillion yen of trade bills that had not been honored when they fell due on Saturday. Japan's previous largest bankruptcy involved Sanyo Special Steel Co., which underwent reorganization in 1965 with liabilities of 42.5 billion yen.

Minister Acts

Asked by newsmen what measures the Finance Ministry is tonsidering following the com-pany's apparent failure, Finance Minister Takeo Fukuda said lie had asked commercial banks to make full use if necessary of special lending quotas reserved for small and medium enterprises.

Ministry official said a slight easing of the current monetary squeeze would probably result from Mr. Fukuda's action.

The special quotas reserved to meet the needs of small business lotal 320 billion yen.

Speaking at a press conference at the Tokyo Stock Exchange. Toshiro Okuma, vice-president of Nihon Netsugaku, said the dililculties were due to "a deadlock m raising operating funds." This suggested that the government's tight mouey policy might be to

Overexpansion Cited

Sources close to the situation. however, sald overexpansion lay problems. Nihon Netsugaku had developed a system under which franchised dealers leased or rented coin-operated room airrenditioners to individuals or to business establishments.

Business expanded very rapidly in 1973, the sources said, because najor Japanese air-conditioners makers underestimated demand and were not able to fully supply the market. In contrast, airconditioner sales have been very sluggish in the first few months of 1974, causing large inventory accumulations.

Nihon Netsugaku sales totaled 36.17 billion yen in the year ended December, up from 19.36 billion yen the previous year. Net profit rose to 932 million yen from 414 million yen, and the firm pald a dividend of 15 yen a share for 1973, up from 12.5 ren the previous year.

If you bank with the Widland, you're in business in Europe.

The idea is, start in Britain and work your way around to the rest of the Continent.

Which is not a new idea, but now that Britain is in the Common Market, it's a better one.

Particularly if you consider it from the point of view of your European banking requirements.

Midland Bank can handle everything for you.

EBIC. The other European Economic Community.

Midland a great British bank is also a participant in European Banks International (EBIC), a group of 7 of the great banks of Europe with almost 9,000 branches.

So when you start to do business in Europe you won't have to go through the tortuous discussions and the usual yards of red tape that are normally required to make arrangements with different banks in different countries.

Midland and other banks participating in EBIC act like one bank. At a moment's notice you'll be able to arrange complete full service banking facilities on a local basis at any one of the branches of the EBIC Banks

Fast money.

It also gives you a means of moving money around at the speed of a telex machine.

Arrange the money through any branch of the Midland in Britain and it can be made available for you to draw on immediately wherever you want it in Europe.

The Midland in Britain.

In Britain, Midland Bank Group is as powerful a banking group as you can get. Wherever you are you can expect to find us in the neighbourhood because with over 3.400 branches in the United Kingdom there are very few neighbourhoods we aren tin.

And the branch near you won't be just a handy place to cash a cheque in.

In fact, your Midland Branch will offer you a range of financial services you wouldn't ordinarily expect to get from a bank because Midland Bank provides much more than ordinary bank services.

For instance we are a finance company, a leasing company, a factoring company, a merchant bank and a world famous travel agency. (Thomas Cook & Son.)

And because of this diverse range of business interests you'll find us a lot more flexible over things that involve money than a bank that's just a bank.

The things we do for business.

For a start if what you want is some capital to work with, we'll lend you a hand on a short, medium or long term basis.

Li you have to acquire some capital equipment and you want to get more for your money, you'll be interested to know that we can arrange for you to lease anything from office equipment to an executive jet.

If you're a little concerned about cash flow and the problems of extending credit in a country you've never done business in before, don't worry.

We can offer factoring and invoice discount facilities as well as provide you with credit insurance and give you status reports on any company in the country.

If you're setting up with a view to going public in the future you can keep it private because you won't have to go outside the Midland Group to arrange it.

We can handle your share issue, advise you on mergers and takeovers and offer you the full range of merchant bank services.

Once you're operating in Britain and before you spread out to the rest of Europe we'll give you economic assessments of countries, reviews of markets and commodities, advice on methods of payment and access to a special trade register containing thousands of our company contacts in every branch of trade and industry.

To sum up, before you make a move anywhere in Europe we suggest you do one thing now - get in touch with us.

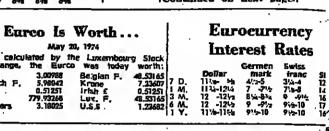

We'd like to send you a 32 page booklet that in general terms tells you all you need to know about setting up in Britain.

To get your copy write to Mr. F. O. Dunphy, Midland Bank, Boom 50, 60 Gracechurch Street, London ECSP 3BN, England.

2 reasons why the price of SILVER may rise steeply

Two powerful forces are at work today which make 2 steep rise in the price of silver seem inevitable.

First, silver, like many other natural resources, is in short emply. The demand for silver surpassed new production for each of the last 23 years. And for each of the last 13 years, the demand for silver surpassed new production by more than 100

This excess of demand over supply is exerting a strong, steady upward pressure on the price of silver. During the 1960s the price of silver rose 95%. So far in the 70s, the rise has been

Second, we're in an era of worldwide inflation. People throughout the world are losing confidence in the ability of governments to check inflation. And when that happens, they seek the security of precious metals such as silver, rather than paper

Indeed, for nearly 2,600 years, since the first silver coloage, knowledgeable investors have turned to silver for financial protection-because silver generally performs well in oad times.

For example, during Chile's recent decade of inflation, the price of silver increased more than 1,500 times. During Germany's nightmarish runaway inflation following World War I. the price of silver increased more than 91 billion times. And during the 33 years of our corrent inflation, the price of silver has increased more than 10-fold.

Harry Browne, who correctly predicted the first dolfar devaluation in ST years, now writes in his new book. You Can Prope from a Monetary Crisis. "Silver offers a way to hedge against a depreciating dollar, to be on the right side of a shortage for a change, to be relatively invulnerable to the next depression, and to preserve a long-term store of value through a runaway inflation."

Now, our new pooklet shows you the why's and how's of silver investing. In The Case for Silver by Louis E. Catabini, President of the Pacific Coast Coin Exchange, you'll discover: . Why worldwide sliver consumption is in a powerful long-term

- · The unique properties of silver and why is is an assential and messioesitutable commodity in many industries;

LONDON, May 20 (AP) -The staid Foreign Office boxed today to women's liberation and agreed that women may have "Ms" on their passports instead of Mise or Mrs.

The ministry's Passport Division surrendered after a week of picketing last month by the liberation movement.

DAYAN BRANKURIKURIKS You can beat inflation for the next ten years A studio apartment in the new Nell Gwynn House enables you to beat inflation in one important area for the next ten years-and then destroy it. For an average outgoing of £3,600 per year for ten years, you can have a luxurious pied aterre flat backed by every service a businessman could need. After that, the apartment is yours for the next 115 years, with nothing to pay but the normal service charge and the rates. (Currently £300 p.a.) Costs rise dramatically year by year. Three years ago a double room in a first class hotel in London cost $15 per night. In 1974, it costs £25. In 1984? We would hate to guess. A small furnished flat in a luxury service block in the West End cost £5,000 p.a. three years ago. That same flat costs £7,000 p.a. loday. We would never claim to say that we have made you an offer you can't refuse, but we think we have made it incredibly difficult. The apartments at Neil Gwynn House are corpeted and curtained to choice. John Siddeley Designers Ltd., are on hand to advise you on the furnishing. Telex, conference rooms, your own renting facility, maid service if required, are only some of the services available. For the company that would rather write out a cheque for £17,000; all this preamble has been unnecessary. Write for coloured brochure or telephone for an appointment to view the show flats.

ELIZABETH ALONE

By William Trevor. Viking, 336 pp. 27.95.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

THOUGH Americans see themselves as tenderly concerned about the ordinary man and are fond of falling back on the phrase "human being" to demonstrate that he belongs to the same species as the extraordinary man, the American interest in Mr. John Doe rarely results in anything but sentimental politics, sociological studies or public opinion and consumer surveys. As far as I can see. Americans tend to take in either statistically or hypothetically. You won't find him very often in American fic-tion, for example. There, the extraordinary man is needed to liven things up: the artist or in-tellectual, the moral or sexual hero, the tormented or demented, the clown, the villain, the Faustian seeker after power. austian seeker after power.

The British differ from the Americans in this. Though I don't believe any self-respecting British writer would ever use an expression like "he, or she, is - or I am - a human being," many of them seem to be fascinated by this legendary creature, the ordinary man. They have built what is almost a separate novelistic genre around him. Poking about in the thrift shop of his psyche, they often find the most surprising things. There are times, in fact, when the reaches of his personality appear to be so exotic and far flung that I am tempted to say that the sun never sets on him.

I think it is a commonly accepted generalization that Americans are given to overstatement and the British to understate-ment. This certainly holds true in fiction, but it turns out that it is not always a disanyantage. After a long and rather painful period of apprenticeship, Americans are getting rather good at hyperbole-in language as well as in characterization. And by com-parison, British novels occasionally sound muffled, reluctant to speak up, as if their authors had taken some sort of Hippocratic oath to protect their characters' secrets.

This is the case in William Trevor's "Elizabeth Alone." The novel is essentially about three women having hysterectomies and a fourth trying to avert a miscarriage. Even in these days of raised consciousness, this may not immediately strike the general reader as a promising plot. Now, in an American novel I would probably be able to determine what a hysterectomy meant in the author's terms. It would be a symbol, of course, for some sort of sea change, according to the acter.

In Mr. Trevor's novel, it is merely, to the best of my knowledge, the removal of the three women's uteruses. Naturally, it does have some impact on their personalities, but not much on the book. They are just women who are no longer able to have babies, and none of them wanted to in any case. Elizabeth, the principal character of the book, Times book reviewer.

were made in the diagramed deal, South might have bid four hearts directly over the opening bid of one club, but there were some prospects of slam and the preliminary take-out double was the right procedure.

West led the club king, and East overtook. The winning defense at this point would have been to shift to a trump, leaving West with the club jack as an exit card, but East made the normal play of continuing with the club queen. South ruffed and played four rounds of trumps, forcing West to open spades or diamonds.

A diamond play would have simplified South's task: He would then have been able to lead a spade from the dummy taking advantage of East's doubleton honor holding.

"West did the hest he could hy leading the spade seven, and East played well by ducking when dummy played low. South was now sure of two spade tricks, and the question was whether he could reach the dummy to take a diamond finesse. If East had played the spade king the jack would have become an entry to dummy.

After winning with the spade ten and leading one more round of trumps South reached time position:

Gordie Howe Once Again With Winner

HOUSTON, May 20 (UPI).-The Houston Aeros, led by two goals each from Murray Hall and Larry Lund, and by Gordie Howe's four assists, outskated the Chicago Cougars, 6-2, last night to win the World Hockey Association championship in four straight games. The Aeros scored three goals in each of the first two periods to tuck away the Avco World Cup trophy early.

Gordie Howe initiated a powerplay second goal by passing to his son, Mark, in the right corner. As he drew goalie Cam Newton out of the net, Mark centered the puck to Hall and Houston led, 2-0. Hall scored again 60 seconds later on a tip-in of Gordie Howe's long shot. In the second period. Andre

Hinse scored on a rebound of Gordie'a shot, Howe, 25 years with the Detroit Red Wings in the National

Boston's hopes for some lategame heroics were dashed at 17:38 of the third period when defensemen. Bobby Orr was whistled for holding in what Guidolin called "one of the worst calls in hockey."

Pivers' coach Fred Shero said he didn't know his club had won the title until his players "began jumping onto the ice."

Then bediam broke loose, Flyer captain Bobby Clarke and Parent skated slowly around the ice, the coveted cup cradled in their arms and tears rolling down their cheeks. Fans leaped over the sideboards and paraded along behind them, in Pied Piper fashion. The celebration carried over into the dressing room where the jubilant Piyers were joined in the champagne drinking by their wives, possibly the first time women had joined a victory locker room celebration. Parent was still in tears and star defenseman Barry Ashbee, who nearly lost an eye when struck in the face by a puck in the semi-final series against New York, wore dark glasses and a contented smile.

. No More a Dream

"If someone told me before the sesson that we'd win tha Stanley Cup," Shero said, "I would have told them they were crazy even to think this team would be first in the division. This is something I've dreamed about for 25 years." While Shern was holding court, Flyers' board chairman Ed Snider led a raucous celebration in the adjoining locker room, Snider stood atop a table in the sweltering room and helped each player get a sip of cham-pagne from the Stanley Cup. He then was holsted into the showers by three Philadelphia players. After taking his drink from the cup. Parent summed up the winning feeling, "When you're 5 or 6 years old. you watch it the playoffs; and you see the Canadiens win the cup and you dream about it." he sald, "You think, maybe once in my life I can win that cup. Now it's here. Right now, You can't explain how great that is."

Preakness and Derby Winners Race Toward Belmont Stakes

BALTIMORE, May 20.-The getaway from Pinilico vesterday was just about as fast as the streich run displayed by Little Current in winning the Preakness Saturday. There's only three weeks to get ready for the Belmont Stakes, the third of the Triple Crown races.

Little Current was in a van at am yesterday nn his way to New York's Belmont Park. In the same van, and also headed for the June 8 race, was Cannonade, the Kentucky Derby winner and the Preakness loser.

Cannonade, who showed his might in the stretch at Churchill Downs, was the favorite for the Preakness, but he wound up third. behind Little Current and longshot Neapolitan Way, Cannonade will have an entry mate in the 1 I 2-mile Belmont Stakes. Judger, also trained by Woody Stephens, should do better in the distance race, and will probably have a smaller field to face than he dld in the Derby, when he was caught in the traffic of the 23

Laver, 35, Doesn't Act Very Old

Defeats Riessen In Event Final

By Leonard Koppett LAS VEGAS, May 20 (NYT).-Playing as well as he ever has in his illustrious career, Rod Laver brushed aside Marty Riessen. 6-2. 6-2. yesterday to win the third annual Alan King Caesar's Palaco tennis tournament.

It was no contest, even though Riessen, who had beaten John Newcombe, Arthur Ashe and Tom Gorman in succession here, fildn°t do anything wrong, Laver was simply in complete control of every aspect of his remarkable game, quick and sharp, and when he had to run occasionally, he looked 10 years younger than his age of 35.

Pancho Gonzales, the host professional at Caesar's Palace, said he had never seen Laver play so well, going back to the Australian's rookie days. Rlessen, who is 23, hasn't been watching Laver quite that long, but he has the best record against him of any other American and he expressed the same evaluation.

Laver has now joined New-combe and Jimmy Conuors above the $100,000 mark in winnings this season. He will not compete again until August. While most of the other top players will be moving on to the European tournaments and World Team Tennis commitments. Laver will be spending his time at two tennis camps and driving around his wife and young son in the Mes-cedes Benz 450-SLC that he won and for wbfch internal revenue, of course, will expect a full accounting.

His winnings stand at $107.050: Newcombe has $185,700 and Connors $110,000, Riessen's $15,000 second-place money was the most he had ever won, bringing his season total to $44,295. Half an hour after be had taken the singles, Laver was on the court again, making more spectacular shots as he and Roy Emerson won the doubles final from Newcombe and Prew Mc-Millan, 7-6, 6-4.

ROME, May 20 (AP) -After three years of underwater ex-ploration, archaeologists have discovered a Bronze Age village in a lake 65 miles northwest of Rome. The village, dating from about 1100 to 1300 BC. is under Lake Mezzano in Viterbo.

gatherings. Today, some of the most respected

U.S. research institutes are building windmills.

Back to the Windmill for Unquixotic Energy

By Nancy Hicks

INCOLNVILLE, Maine (NYT),-Neil Welliver is an artist, a Liarmer, a self-proclaimed ecology freak and the owner of a windmill. For the post year and a half, the three-blade windmill, mounted atop a 50-foot tower behind his sprawling farm house, has been the source of electricity to light his home, wash his clothes, pump his water.

While Welliver, a painter in the avant-garde tradition, may be supplying power for his home in a seemingly old-fashioned manner, he is actually a member of the energy avant-garde: those who recognized the potential energy crisis and looked to some alternative source of power-old and new-to lessen that

No quixotic lot, this pool of windmill advocates now includes members of some of the most serious research institutes in the country, who have streamlined the old picturesque mills with modern theories of aerodynamics and have given the long romanticized devices the 20th-century name "wino generating

Research

The National Science Foundation and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, for example, are spending $865,000 in the next two years to test an experimental 100kilowatt wind generator at the Lewis Research Center in Sandusky, Ohio. In addition, NASA is receiving bids for two additional preliminary designs for smaller systems.

Grumman Aerospace Corporation of Bethpage, N.Y., has bought for an undisclosed sum the rights to develop for electricity production a cloth-bladed windmill called a Sailwing. designed by Thomas Sweepey of Princeton University.

Universities such as the California Institute of Technology and the University of Michigan are teaching courses in wind energy. In addition, countless Americans, many living in rural areas such as this one, where electricity is often expensive, are buying and installing windmills as a source of power for their

In any case a decided effort is being made to look at wind generation as a possible source of power, which some experts estimate could supply up to 10 percent of the nation's elec-

William Heronemous, an eogineer from toe University of Massachusetts, summed up this new seriousness about wind eoergy at a symposium this spring at the New York State Atomic Space Development Authority.

"Three years ago. I would have been laughed out of a gathering such as this one," said Heronemous, who tried to revive interest in large-scale production of windmills in 1970. The country's developing energy shortages have added reality to

For Efficiency

Wind energy is certainly not being considered as The Answer to America's voracious energy needs. But it is being looked at for efficiency and economy as one of several alternative sources in what most experts believe will be an energy mix for the next few decades.

"There is no question that they are technically feasible," said Louis Divone, B program manager for wind-energy research at the National Science Foundation. "The question is how to design them according to modern technology. The country hasn't done any significant research in wind systems for 30

Windmills are known to be a regional resource, especially in coastal Bress and Boross the Great Plains, where wind velocities exceed 10 miles an hour.

Modern windmills have three basic problems to solve: One is design to maximize the force of the wind, the second is what to do with the electricity manufactured by the mill, the third

New Designs

New designs for wind generating systems range from the three-blade metal model that Welliver has to three clothcovered hlades, to a hoop design, called a Carrieus rotor, which was developed in the 1930s and is being tested by NASA in Virginia, to a network of dozens of tiny generators attached to some type of net.

Unless the wind velocity is steady and strong enough to keep electrical production constant, a supplementary system must be used, or some method must be found to store excess power for the times when the wind is not blowing.

Welliver, for example, has a 60-battery storage network in the basement of his house. When these batteries are fully charged, the system directly operates household appliances

Other storage methods are having the electricity converted into hydrogen by electrolyzing water, or the windmill could drive an air compressor, storing the air for release as needed or, on a larger scale, the electricity created by the wind could be fed into a large power network, obviating the need to use other fuels when wind energy is available.

The Reason Hope Cc * PEOPLE: Left the King of Sik

The real reason that Hope 33, left her husband, Thondup Namgyal, 49, king of Sikkim, last year was that opposition politicians had accused her of being an American spy. The king told Myron Belkind of Associated Press, during an interview in New Delhi. that his wife was hurt by frequent allegations that she was trying to exert U.S. influence on the Indian protectorate. (The offi-cial story until now has been that she went to New York to enroll the couple's two children in school and to arrange medical care for the king's daughter by his first marriage).

"She had done a lot for Sikkim," the king said, "She developed Sikkimese textbooks which are being published by Oxford University. But our op-ponents said she was trying to introduce American textbooks and an American educational system in Sikkim. She also had assisted some atudents to go to the United States on some visits, But all this became distorted. The allegations were very wrong and unfortunate."

The king went on to say "Naturally she was not used to these political thrashes . She felt hurt, and that was to be expected. I'm hurt myself, but that is part of my job." He ruled out a divorce—but the couple's future would seem to depend on the king's success in retaining some power in Sikkim
